FEATURED ARTICLES

2 A Cause for Hope: Economic Revitalization in Iraq

Paul Brinkley, Deputy Under Secretary of Defense for Business Transformation
An interagency initiative, the Task Force for Business and Stabilization Operations is helping to quell insurgent violence by resuscitating Iraq's old state-owned industries.

12 Surrounded: Seeing the World from Iran's Point of View

Houman A. Sadri, Ph.D.
If U.S. policy makers would consider how the world looks through Iran's eyes, the two nations might be able to avert a potentially catastrophic showdown.

32 The Agile-Leader Mind-Set: Leveraging the Power of Modularity in Iraq

Colonel (P) Robert B. Brown, U.S. Army
A brigade combat team that inculcates an agile-leader mind-set is a powerful force in any fight.

45 Peace in the Posavina, or Deal with Us!

Colonel Gregory Fontenot, U.S. Army, Retired
In 1995-96, the Ready First Combat Team was on uncertain ground as it deployed to Bosnia to enforce the Dayton Accords.

61 Toward Strategic Communication

Brigadier General Mari K. Eder, U.S. Army
Strategic communication masses public information at a critical time and place to accomplish a specific objective.

71 Focusing Training—The Big Five for Leaders

Colonel Jeffrey R. Sanderson, U.S. Army, and Captain Scott J. Akerley, U.S. Army
When the 4th Cavalry Brigade trains leaders, it emphasizes the basics: troop-leading procedures, intelligence preparation of the environment, ground assault convoys, fire distribution and control, and counterinsurgency tactics.

79 The Art and Aggravation of Vetting in Post-Conflict Environments

Sean McFate
Creating a professional indigenous security force depends on the competent vetting of candidates for that force.

88 The Maras: A Menace to the Americas

Federico Brevé, former Minister of Defense of Honduras
We must act now against the mara gangs in Central America before they ally with drug traffickers to topple the region's governments.

96 We the People Are Not the Center of Gravity in an Insurgency

Major Mark P. Krieger Jr., U.S. Army
Military thinkers and planners often identify the people as the center of gravity in an insurgency, but an insurgency's true strategic center of gravity is its cause.

INSIGHTS

101 A Synchronized Approach to Population Control

Brigadier General Joseph Anderson, U.S. Army, and Colonel Gary Volesky, U.S. Army
Population control measures are an important part of the current plan to stabilize Baghdad.

104 The Bundeswehr's New Media Challenge

Thomas Rid
As the Bundeswehr's recent "skull scandal" demonstrates, armed forces all over the world must quickly come to grips with a new, aggressive media environment.

110 The Surge Can Succeed

Majors Jarett Broemmel, Terry L. Clark, and Shannon Nielsen, U.S. Army
Those who doubt the potential of the current surge in Baghdad should look at our operations in Mosul, Ramadi, and Samarra in 2003-2004.
